Court Dismisses Action Filed By Track Owners

A final decree restraining use of the West End Race Track at Gilbert was filed yesterday in the prothonotary's office.

The decree, issued by President Judge Fred W. Davis, dismissed some 20 exceptions to a decree nisi issued by Judge Davis last month.

The final opinion and decree filed yesterday have the effect of halting track operation. Only alternative left the defendants, the West End Automobile Racing Association, Pleasant Valley Inc., and Carolina and Joseph Riboldi, operators of the track, is an appeal to a higher court.

On a local level, yesterday's action brought a final wind-up of the lengthy case.

Action against the track was started last Fall by the Salem Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Salem Lutheran Church groups and a number of Gilbert citizens.

They objected to noise and dust raised by stock-car racing on the track. The plaintiffs had a number of attorneys in their legal battery during the course of the hearings. This Spring and Summer, however, matters relating to the case were handled by George T. Robinson for the plaintiffs and Russell Mervine for the defendants.

Mervine filed the exceptions to Judge Davis' original opinion and decree, which granted the injunction.

Following the original decree, the race track was operated for at least one Sunday. However, the final decree makes further operation of the track a remote possibility unless appeal is taken.

Judge Davis, in yesterday's opinion, indicated he saw no reason to change his original view that operation of the track constituted a nuisance to the plaintiffs and prevented them from enjoying their property—and that he did not see how the nuisance value of the track could be reduced sufficiently by mechanical or procedural means to eliminate the nuisance.

Farouk Wealth Confiscated

Cairo, Egypt (AP)—Egypt's reform government last night seized the properties of ex-King Farouk, valued in some estimates at more than two billion dollars. The cabinet appointed a two-man board to administer them.

It is generally believed that the properties will be distributed by the government as part of a vast new land reform program now under consideration by Premier Aly Maher and his cabinet.

Among the royal possessions taken over were:

Four palaces with over 1,000 luxuriously furnished rooms; it is believed they will go to Egypt's universities which have already asked for them; more than 20 country villas; over 100 fancy motor cars; and about one third of Egypt's six million acres of arable soil.

This land sells at an average of $1,148 an acre, but the best acreage brings as high as $2,870.

Last night's seizure revealed for the first time the vast extent of Farouk's wealth and indicates he rated on a par with the Nizam of Hyderabad as one of the two formerly richest men in the world.

After fleeing the country July 26 Farouk told reporters in Cairo he would be a comparatively poor man.

Crime Probers Die In Crash

Atlanta, (AP)—Two Kefauver Crime Committee witnesses were killed in the flaming crash of a private plane yesterday. More than $16,000 in cash was found in the wreckage.

The dead are James H. Brink and Charles Drahmann.

Pickets Wave Underwear In Lieu Of Signs

New Orleans (AP)—Two hundred women from a plant of BVD—"better ventilated drawers"—flaunted starched underwear at the National Labor Relations Board yesterday.

The women and a sprinkling of men from BVD's Pascagoula, Miss., plant marched before the NLRB office wearing or waving the underwear in lieu of picket signs.

They demanded that the labor board call an immediate election to determine whether a majority of the 400 workers at the plant want union representation.

Arnall Urges Congress To Curb Prices

Washington (AP)—Ellis Arnall, who is about to resign as U. S. price stabilizer, said last night Congress may have to be called into special session this Fall to put a lid on rising food prices.

He hinted that he may recommend consideration of a special session when he sees President Truman today to discuss his resignation as head of the Office of Price Stabilization (OPS) and talk about "a lot of things."

The former Georgia governor is expected to ask the President to relieve him Sept. 1. He told reporters he is anxious to get back to his law practice and other business interests in Georgia as soon as possible. Arnall took over the OPS post last Feb. 21, when Michael V. DiSalle resigned to seek a U. S. Senate seat from Ohio.

Arnall said food costs rose more rapidly during the last month than in any comparable period in the nation's history. He forecast that in the months ahead the increase will be "constant and steady."

Recent ceiling boosts for steel, copper and other metals, Arnall said, are a big factor in the prospect for higher prices. Crop shortages caused by the drought, and "an inadequate price control law," are other factors, he said.

In addition he noted that OPS is about to grant aluminum producers higher ceilings.

Arnall said about a dozen states already have been declared part of a broad disaster area stricken by drought.

"No one can deny that this will have a disastrous effect upon thousands of the nation's farmers," Arnall said. "But its terms in disaster will be translated even into a broader field. It will mean disaster to your pocketbook. It will mean that the cost of food will go up appreciably in the months ahead."

He mentioned the decontrol by Congress of fruits and vegetables in raw and processed form last month as evidence of "an inadequate law." In addition, he said, OPS is being forced to curtail its activities because Congress cut its operating funds.

Referring to this and rising prices, Arnall added: "If things continue to get out of hand it may be necessary for Congress to reassemble and to give to this agency (OPS) power to do the job for you."

Geographer Says Russian Can't Be Great Producer

New York (AP)—Russia never can become a fully first-rate producer nation due to the very nature of its geography, a noted geographer said yesterday.

Dr. George B. Cressey, president of the International Geographical Union and Maxwell professor of geography at Syracuse University said these are among the "very serious and permanent handicaps" the Soviet Union faces:

Vast cold and vast dry regions. Too many mountains. Lack of sufficient sea outlets. Widely inaccessible areas.

"If the United States discontinued agricultural research and stood still, letting the Russians go ahead and develop new seeds and new techniques," said Cressey, "the Russians can't ever be as well fed as the people in the United States."

Fire Destroys Hotel

Kennett Square (AP)—Historic Kennett Square Hotel, part of which was built in 1776, yesterday was destroyed in a pre-dawn fire. Damage was estimated at $100,000. Some 25 guests in the four-story structure fled to safety.

Disappearance Of Dog Sends Cows On Strike; Miss Blackie Bringing Them From Pasture

The cows won't come home at the Donald DeOtte farm in Hamilton Township.

The case of the reluctant cows came to light yesterday when DeOtte inserted an ad in "The Daily Record" appealing to its readers to help him find his lost shepherd dog.

Seems as though the cows are accustomed to having the shiny-black, smooth-haired dog come after them and escort them home from the pasture.

With the dog gone, the cows have gone on strike.

DeOtte isn't quite certain how the dog disappeared. He has pieced together a part of the story from accounts given him by innocent bystanders, however.

On Monday, the story goes, DeOtte parked his car in front of the A and P in Stroudsburg. He left the dog on the inside of the car and proceeded to do some necessary shopping.

Eisenhower Sets Forth Postive Objectives For America, Receives Bernard Baruch Award

Los Angeles (AP)—In Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's speech at the national encampment of the VFW last night—his first major address since he was nominated for president by the Republicans—the general set forth these "positive objectives" for America:

"One—To increase America's strength: Spiritual, creative and material.

"Two—To win a just and lasting peace secured by the strength of the free world.

"Three—To build a prosperity not based on war.

"Four—To make America's promise of equality a living fact for every American.

"Five—To strengthen and to extend measures for the security and welfare of the people.

"Six—To protect the earnings and savings of the people from a double toll of high prices and high taxes.

"Seven—To serve the worthy interests of every group of our people, yet make the test of each policy: Is it good for America?

"Eight—To restore honesty to government.

"Nine—To insure, by means which guard our basic rights, that those who serve in government are Americans of loyalty and dedication.

"Ten—To revive in every American the faith that he can achieve a better future for himself and his family."

Eisenhower said:

"These points are not a program of impossibilities. Every one of them is within our reach—provided only that you and I accept our responsibilities as citizens—and do our civic duty—with the same dedication and courage with which you did your duty as soldiers."

Eisenhower came to the VFW encampment in Los Angeles' Coliseum to receive that organization's first annual Bernard M. Baruch Award, named for the elder statesman who has served as an adviser to Presidents since the days of World War One.

The general said he was accepting the medal—awarded for 1951's "most valuable contribution to the cause of American unity and world peace"—not for himself but as a representative of all other soldiers and comrades.

Addressing the annual encampment of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in Los Angeles, Eisenhower set forth a 10-point program aimed at lasting peace, honesty in government and loyalty in federal service.

A positive objective, he said, is "to build a prosperity not based on war."

Behind the scenes in both political camps, tense jockeying went forward as Stevenson and Eisenhower forces sought to woo the traditionally Democratic "Solid South" without offending advocates of civil rights legislation.

Gov. Adlai Stevenson, of Illinois, the Democratic presidential nominee, conferred for 90 minutes with Mississippi's Gov. Hugh White, and White later told newsmen he was sure Stevenson would "solidify the South" wherever he appears in the forthcoming campaign.

White refused to say, however, whether he thought Stevenson would get the support of Virginia, South Carolina and Louisiana. He said there was some sentiment against Stevenson in Mississippi but not "too strong."

White indicated he was satisfied that Stevenson would take a "moderate" stand on civil rights. He said Stevenson is "all right" on FEPC—creation of a Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission—if Stevenson's views have been published correctly.

Stevenson has said he thinks the states should handle the problem of job discrimination, with the federal government stepping in only if the states fail to handle the job.

The Illinois governor moved to tighten his southern lines still further by arranging conferences for today with two of his unsuccessful rivals for the Democratic nomination—Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia and Sen. Estes Kefauver of Tennessee.

Stevenson halted their visits as evidence that he has little to worry about losing the South. Stevenson said he had reason to balk on the continued "fidelity of the South" to the Democratic ticket, and at the same time he discounted the chances of the Republican party capturing the sizeable Negro vote.

"I can hardly see why the Negro vote could find any happy refuge in the Republican party," Stevenson said.

The big problem confronting both Stevenson and his GOP rival, Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, is how to satisfy white Southern leaders on the thorny issue of civil rights and yet appeal to Northern backers of federal civil rights bills.

In Denver, conjecture arose that Eisenhower might be shifting ground somewhat on the issue after a group of Republican Negro leaders visited the general Monday and later endorsed his candidacy.

As viewed in some quarters, that might sound as though Eisenhower had given the Negro leaders cause for hope in their struggle to put civil rights under control of the federal government instead of the states.

In past statements, Eisenhower has said the handling of civil rights should be left mainly to the states.

Threatened Areas Pinpointed By ANZUS Conferences

Honolulu, (AP)—Top diplomats of the United States, Australia and New Zealand yesterday explored potential military obligations under the ANZUS Mutual Security Pact and pinpointed areas of the world threatened by Soviet aggression.

A spokesman said no disagreements have cropped up so far.

Most of yesterday's first session was devoted to discussion, but deputies were named to a permanent council which will meet regularly in Washington.

The three deputies are Undersecretary of State David K. Bruce, Sir Percy C. Spender and Leslie K. Munro, Australian and New Zealand ambassadors to Washington.

Rhee Leading Election Rivals

Pusan, Korea (AP)—White-haired Syngman Rhee led a field of three other presidential candidates by a wide margin today as incomplete returns in yesterday's nationwide balloting filtered into this provisional capital.

The 77-year-old president, seeking a second four-year term, was far ahead in the Seoul and Pusan areas. The rest of the country had not been heard from but Rhee's backers predicted he would sweep the election.

The election itself was quiet and orderly. It was marred by one Communist guerrilla raid on a polling place.

It was the young Korean Republic's first direct election of a president.

Flash Seen At H-Bomb Plant

Augusta, Ga. (AP)—A "shapeless incandescent flash of light" was reported over the Atomic Energy Commission's billion-dollar H-bomb plant early yesterday.

AEC officials said "appropriate authorities have been notified."

The brilliant flash was first reported by an official of the E. I. Du Pont de Nemours Company, who refused use of his name. He told the Augusta Chronicle the flash had been observed at 7:30 a.m. and "looked to me like a huge bulb in a flash camera."

He added that "many persons" said they had observed the unusual sight at the same time.

Later in the day, an official of the AEC, who also asked to remain anonymous, said he had no logical explanation. He added that the security section of the project had conducted an investigation.

Swedish Fires New Protests At Russians

Stockholm, Sweden (AP)—Sweden fired two more strong protests at Russia yesterday and said she would send to the United Nations a full account of her quarrel with the Soviets over the shooting down of two unarmed Swedish planes last June.

Swedish Foreign Minister Oesten Unden summoned the Soviet ambassador, Rear Adm. Constantine Rodionov, and handed him two notes, one of which asked Moscow to order its diplomats here to stop spying on Swedish military establishments.

In the fifth of a series of protests over the plane shootings, Sweden expressed "surprise and regret" at Russia's refusal to let the International Court of Justice at The Hague pass on Swedish charges that the aircraft were downed over international waters.

The note, denying emphatically again that Swedish fliers fired first at Russian planes or were over Soviet territory, served notice that the Swedish "reserve their full right to revert to the matter in the form and at the time they will find suitable."

Ryan Takes Lead In Kansas Race

Topeka, Kas. (AP)—Wayne Ryan, backed by Gov. Edward F. Arn, took over the lead last night in the Republican lieutenant governorship race shortly after the polls closed in the Kansas primary election.

California Jury Convicts 14 Communist Leaders

Los Angeles, (AP)—Fourteen California Communist leaders were convicted yesterday on a federal indictment charging that they conspired to teach and advocate overthrowing the government by force and violence.

They are in jail pending a hearing at 11 a. m. today on a defense motion urging U. S. Judge William C. Mathes to reverse the unanimous verdict of the jury of eight women and four men.

The jurors had the case under deliberation from Thursday afternoon until yesterday morning. Their verdict against each defendant was unanimous.

The trial, longest in a Los Angeles Federal Court, has lasted six months, compared with nine months required to try and convict 11 top Communists in New York City in 1949. The charges are virtually identical, the maximum penalties being five years in prison, $10,000 fine, or both.

Thirteen of the California defendants have been at liberty under $5,000 and $10,000 bail. The fourteenth, Mrs. Oleta O'Connor Yates, 43, San Francisco, Northern California party secretary, was jailed June 26 by Judge Mathes for contempt of court for refusing to answer questions about other persons suspected of being Communists. Mrs. Yates also faces sentencing on 14 counts of contempt.

Bail for the 13 was exonerated after Judge Mathes ordered them and Mrs. Yates to jail pending today's hearing. The men were led away in handcuffs.

MIGs Sweep Nearly To 38th Parallel

Seoul, (AP)—Communist MIGs swept southward almost to the 38th Parallel in Korea yesterday and U. S. Sabre jets blasted four out of the skies in five dog fights.

The Fifth Air Force reported six other sweep-wing Red jets were damaged—one by a comparatively slow U. S. F-84 Thunderjet.

The Air Force described the Communist jets as "very aggressive." Perhaps they were trying to head off fighter-bomber assaults which the Allies warned would be unleashed on 78 North Korean towns housing military installations. Civilians were warned by radio and pamphlets to get out.

Fighting was sporadic along the battle front. The Chinese Reds probed Allied advance positions west of the Pukhan River in Eastern Korea early Tuesday but were repulsed.

In Tuesday's first air battle—a dog fight between four Sabres and six MIGs—two of the American planes teamed up to shoot down a MIG. Pilots said the Communist airman parachuted between Kunu and the Yalu River boundary of Manchuria.

Late in the afternoon an unspecified number of MIGs and Sabres clashed in the Haeju area, with one MIG going down and another being damaged.

In other dog fights, Sabre jet pilots shot down two MIGs near Sinuiju in far Northwest Korea.

Survey Shows No Oak Wilt In District

An aerial survey of Northampton, Pike and Monroe Counties was made recently to determine if any oak wilt was present in the Delaware Forest District. One of three light airplanes owned by the Commonwealth came to the Stroudsburg airport and operations were conducted from there. Previous to the plane's arrival, flight-strip one-half mile wide were placed upon maps of the three counties in such a manner to give a 10 per cent flight of the more forested areas of the counties. E. F. McNamara and P. R. Drury, aerial observers from the district forester's office in Stroudsburg, then began the search for oak wilt.

As this disease attacks the crowns of oaks and causes discolorations varying from yellow to bronze zones in the upper parts of the crown, spotting from the air is very easily accomplished. Constant visual along the flight lines in all three counties failed to reveal any infection of oak wilt in the district. Some trees killed by lightning, having symptoms similar to oak wilt, were spotted from the air but investigation indicated they were not affected by the disease.

Two Brothers Among New VFW Members

Two brothers who served together in World War One have signed up as members of VFW Post 2540, a post official reported yesterday.

They are Michael and William Chariton. The two new members helped push the Stroudsburg post toward the 1,000-member goal.

William is operator of Chariton's Lodge and was a member of the First Infantry Division in the first World War. Brother Michael still is connected with the armed services—as an inspector of service installations overseas.

A spokesman for the post reported that Elmer D. Christine, East Stroudsburg, recently elected senior vice-commander of Pennsylvania's VFW, is in Los Angeles attending the VFW convention which will run through Friday.

The next meeting of the post will be Aug. 12 at 8 p. m., and Commander Fred Hoffman said the discussion will center around the recent Pittsburgh convention at which Christine was named to the high post.

Thursday night will be "dollar night" at the post. All male members of the home association are invited for the refreshments and entertainment.

Surviving are his wife, Kate; two sisters, Mrs. Blanche Shiffer, Stroudsburg; Mrs. Ray Evans, Detroit, Mich.; two brothers, Richard of St. Cloud, Fla. and John of Greentown.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2 p. m. at Frey funeral home, South Sterling, Rev. Frederick Fulmer officiating. Interment will be made in the Simonstown Cemetery, Greentown.

Mr. Weeks, East Borough, Dies At 52

Lawrence Weeks, 52, of 20 Washington St., East Stroudsburg, died at 10:30 a. m., yesterday in Monroe County General Hospital.

Mr. Weeks, an employee of the Empire Box Co., Minisink Hills, had been in failing health the past seven weeks and was admitted to the hospital three weeks ago.

He was born in Wyoming County, the son of the late George and Josephine McMullen Weeks. Survivors are his wife, Ethel Brink Weeks and one son, Lawrence Earl, both at home; and one sister, Mrs. Nina Tint, Hollywood, Calif.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2:30 p. m. at Lanterman funeral home, Rev. Harold C. Eaton officiating. Interment will be made in Prospect Cemetery.

Voters To Decide Fate Of Agencies

Pennsylvania voters will decide in the Nov. 4 election whether to pave the way for possible liquidation of the state's two borrow-and-build agencies.

A proposed constitutional amendment will be included on the ballot to permit the commonwealth to sell $215 million in bonds to replace issues sold by the General State Authority and the Highway and Bridge Authority.

The proposed amendment passed the 1951 General Assembly too late to be placed on last year's ballot with other amendments.

It would permit the state to borrow up to $175 million to retire GSA bonds and $40 million to replace Highway and Bridge Authority issues.

Although the GSA is authorized to issue up to $235 million in bonds it has only issued $135 million. The Highway and Bridge Authority has issued all its authorized $40 million.

Behind the plan is the idea that bondholders would ask for an interest rate on commonwealth funds cheaper than the 1.74 per cent and the 1.84 per cent now received on GSA bonds. The commonwealth in 1947 obtained a 1.27 per cent interest rate on a $50 million construction bond issue.

The GSA was set up by the 1949 Legislature to undertake construction of buildings for the commonwealth. The state ultimately pays off the cost of the buildings through long-term rental arrangements with the authority.

A proposed constitutional amendment must be approved by two sessions of the legislature before it is submitted to the voters.

The Constitution limits the state's debt to one million dollars without a vote of the people.

Dr. Edward T. Horn, Tannersville, will be out of his office from Aug. 3 to 18th inc.—Adv.

Dropping Of First Atomic Bomb In Warfare Occurred At Hiroshima 7 Years Ago Today

Seven years ago today the world's greatest destructive force was used for the first time in warfare.

The crew of the B-29 bomber flying over the coast of Japan had only a vague idea of the load their plane carried.

Its secret was carefully guarded, not only from the lower-ranking officers on the plane but from the "big brass" as well.

The cargo had been brought to the Pacific area by the power vessel USS Indianapolis.

The ship had docked at Saipan on July 26, 1945.

Transmitting the "cargo" to the plane had been accomplished with military secrecy.

As the huge plane dived over the little-known Japanese city, the mechanism used for dropping the bomb went into action.

The bomb fell to the earth, exploded and an instant later the sky formed the backdrop for a huge, seething mushroom which was to form the symbol of the new, atomic age.

Simultaneously, wire services hummed with the name of the city and banner headlines in the U. S. spread the name—Hiroshima—across the length and breadth of the nation.

Statistics were released—Hiroshima: population—343,969. Dead—78,150. Injured—37,425. Missing—13,083.

The first atomic bomb—a product of many years of research by German, American, British and Japanese physicists—had been dropped.

Three days later—on Aug. 9, 1945—the second bomb, nearly identical with the first, was dropped on a second Japanese city and the name of Nagasaki was added to the list.

With Nagasaki there were more statistics: population—252,630. Dead—73,884.

The number believed injured or missing was no longer listed. Whatever the effect on the outside world, the launching of atomic warfare was credited, in large part, with the close of World War Two.

Just five days later—on Aug. 14, 1945—the Imperial Japanese forces declared an unofficial surrender.

The Rising Sun had set. On the horizon, in its place, stood the ever-rising manifestation of the mushroom as a symbol of the weapon itself—and of the growing responsibility of nations engaged in war.

Seven years ago today.

Small's Big Job

John D. Small has been made over from a figure-head to a man with power to make decisions.

Mr. Small is chairman of the Munitions Board, which by law has the job of making sense out of the military procurement program.

Other board members are representatives of the Air Force, Navy and Army, each lobbying primarily for the interests of his own service. Mr. Small, a civilian, has been little more than the presiding officer over a debating society.

Now, by order of Defense Secretary Lovett, Mr. Small has the power to make decisions for the board, even to the point of overruling all other members.

Congress gave the Munitions Board chairman this power five years ago, subject to the Defense Secretary's discretion. But the discretion never has been exercised. As a result, congressional investigating committees repeatedly have picked extravagant flaws in the military procurement program.

Service jealousies, waste, duplication and lack of unification have been exposed again and again.

Mr. Small, a man of long experience in the government, has a big job. Now, at last, he is in position to do it—if he will.

Pilotless Fighters

Perhaps the age of pilotless aircraft, when fully realized, will be a major element in moving away from war as a national policy for every nation, when all else fails.

Perhaps not, but at least the Air Force has taken a major step toward the ultimate goal of eliminating the pilot, in aircraft now under development by the great Boeing plant, and with still another designed by the Howard Hughes company.

The Boeing model is a ground-to-air defense missile, carrying an experimental fighter designation from the Air Force thus indicating that it performs the same function as a pilotless fighter plane.

Considerable progress has been made in the current crop of radar interceptor fighters, in the move to remove personnel from the aircraft itself. In a plane such as the Lockheed F-94, for example, the pilot and radar operator are little more than passengers monitoring the mechanical movements, for the plane's electronic gear locates the attacking bomber, locks onto it, tracks it and fires the guns automatically. The pilot and radar operator, we presume, are twiddling their thumbs the while and wondering what's for dinner.

In the new pilotless design of Boeing, these same functions are carried out but no man is aboard. In the Howard Hughes development, the so-called "Falcon" his company is building is carried aloft by a mother plane and launched, sans human pilot, from high in the blue rather than from a launching platform on the ground.

The Air Force also has a pilotless bomber coming up soon, as well as other unannounced missiles in the bomber category. Begins to look as though the wild blue yonder is going to be no place for human beings when the shooting starts.

These Days - - By George E. Sokolsky

The Age of Irresponsibility

In his book on the Far East, Governor Thomas E. Dewey interposes an issue, during his description of his visit to Japan. The particular paragraphs are not germane to the visit but form an interdictum on the general subject of official irresponsibility.

Two theories move Dewey to this discussion:

1. That government officials should speak to and confer only with each other and that their conversations and acts must never be placed before the prying eyes of the American people who employ and pay them;

2. That men do err and should not be exposed as having erred, no matter how costly the error may be in national wealth or honor or even in human life.

To prove his point, Tom Dewey recites the following parable:

"On many other occasions, old, confidential reports have been dragged out and exposed to public inspection. The insecurity resulting from such exposure of confidential reports has swept through our whole foreign service. Men who entered the service under Wilson, Harding, Coolidge, and Hoover, as well as more recent appointees, all expressed the same opinion: 'If we are going to be held up to public scorn for our judgments ten or fifteen years after they were made, in the light of changing events, we simply will not stick our necks out. We are willing to file our honest opinions and truthful reports and take our chances with changing administrations of the State Department if our opinions seem wrong in the light of later events; but if everything we say in the exercise of honest judgment is going to be held up to hostile criticism as a result of personal pique on the part of individual Senators or Congressmen or as a result of conditions which have long since changed, we simply won't take the chance."

His conclusion is:

"... it will be a long time before the United States again gets the full benefit of the advice and opinion of the really able men in the career service, who will need much reassurance before they resume the filing of reports which reflect their honest opinions on political trends abroad, social and economic conditions, and the impact made by visiting firemen."

In a word, if 120,000 Americans are casualties because some one erred judgment or lacked knowledge and acted upon false opinions and reached unreasonable conclusions, it is none of the business of the American people or their members of Congress who may be engaged in investigating the causes of a disaster.

Tom Dewey has never permitted citizens who are attending to their own business the privacy he seeks for officials who are attending to the people's business. As a prosecuting attorney and as Governor, he has always employed every process of law and power to get a fact he needed. It is therefore not a little astonishing that he should hold that the people's business is the private concern of those hired to handle it.

The fundamental question here is responsibility. A public official is not hired to do the best he can, which may not be good enough. He is not hired because he is infallible. He is hired to do a particular job and to be responsible to his employers, the taxpayers. Statutes of limitation run in the law; they do not exist in history. The careers of Constantine (288-337), of Genghis Khan (1162-1227), of Napoleon (1769-1821), of Abraham Lincoln (1809-1865), of Franklin D. Roosevelt and Adolf Hitler are constantly being reappraised as more data becomes available. Some day, an historian might even apply himself to Tom Dewey.

The grist of this mill is documents. The archives of many governments and even individuals do not become available for decades or even centuries. Sometimes they disappear altogether or are willfully destroyed to prevent exposure. History is particularly unkind to arrogant egotists whose follies kill off innocent human beings or destroy countries. We are just fully beginning to realize how many crazy men reached positions of rulership and the mischief they have done. Perhaps some day, a psychiatrist will write a history of the genius politician through the centuries.

The documents in the State Department and in the Pentagon cost the American taxpayer billions of dollars and they must in time be made available no matter who comes out of it looking like an idiot.

Try And Stop Me

—by Bennet Cerf

When Juan and Evita Peron were building a luxurious retreat for themselves some miles outside of Buenos Aires they established a rigid guard around the project to prevent the theft of valuable materials. Every day at noon, the story goes, the same workman began to appear at the exit gate with a wheelbarrow loaded with straw. The guard, convinced that there was dirty work afoot, searched the straw more carefully daily—even had it analyzed to see if it possessed special chemical values—but could find nothing to substantiate his suspicion, and had to let the workman pass.

A year later, the guard met the workman, evidently enjoying great prosperity. "Now that all is said and done," pleaded the guard, "just what were you stealing every day on that Peron project?" The workman whispered, "Wheelbarrows."

Washington Report

—by Fulton Lewis, Jr.

Washington, August 5.—The Federal Bureau of Investigation must be re-signed by now to the fact that it probably will be called upon to devote a lifetime proving that Alger Hiss is a liar, perjurer and Communist spy.

With well-timed motions and appeals, altering his innocence, Hiss has cluttered the court records with as strange a collection of devices and ideas as was ever presented to a federal judge.

In almost every instance U.S. Attorney Miles J. Lane, of New York, has called in FBI experts to supply the rebuttal facts while he prepared the arguments destroying the fantastic claims. So far the team has been eminently successful, even to the point of demonstrating the mockery of a $7,500 phony typewriter, built by experts hired by Hiss, who were certain they could prove the former aide of Secretary of State Dean Acheson a "victim of forgery by typewriter." The court held they had proved no such thing.

Federal court records reveal that one of the most difficult points raised by the defense was an allegation that the envelope containing documents secreted in a dumbwaiter by Whitaker Chambers, and the documents themselves, were phony.

Chambers produced the documents from the dumbwaiter shaft in the home of his brother-in-law, where, he said, they had lain for more than ten years. Some bore handwriting notations made by Hiss; all of them incriminated Hiss in the practice of slipping State Department secrets to Communist couriers.

Hiss's lawyers argued, in a motion for re-trial, that the documents revealed variegated stains of discoloration brought on by age, and therefore could not have all been placed in the envelope at the same time, as Chambers alleged.

This was not an easy argument to answer. But experts in the FBI laboratories in Washington and elsewhere examined the documents, traced their point of manufacture and their chemical content, and demonstrated, to the complete satisfaction of Federal Judge Henry Goddard, that there was no reason to suspect chicanery on the part of Chambers.

By the use of various resins and sizings, various sheets of paper yellow at different rates of speed. The sheets of paper, stacked as they were in the envelope, were also subjected to different rates of deterioration.

Those on top aged at a different rate than those in the middle, due to slight degrees of difference in temperature and weight.

The defense next attacked the envelope in which the incriminating papers were contained. Hiss's attorneys charged, in the motion for re-trial, that the envelope could not have been in the dumbwaiter as long as Chambers asserted it had lain there. They asserted, in effect, that the envelope was of an earlier vintage than the documents. If true, Chambers would have lied about when he placed the documents there for hiding, and when he had seen them last.

Once again the U.S. Attorney's office called upon the FBI experts.

Chambers' brother-in-law, had lived in the same residence from the day, in 1937, when Chambers first secreted the document in a dumbwaiter shaft. The FBI asked if the shaft had ever been painted. It had been.

Samples of paint from the wall, and samples that had splattered onto the envelope when the paint had been applied, were submitted to FBI laboratory technicians. The experts found that the paint on the wall and the paint on the envelope was of the same manufacture, texture, and, more important, it had the same age span.

Let the Hiss defense forces protest that such findings are loaded against them, it can be pointed out that FBI reports on the paint and paper are available to defense attorneys. In fact, samples of the papers were snipped off and handed over to defense lawyers so that they could make an independent investigation.

Next, Hiss defense forces claimed that the Hiss typewriter, which at the trial they admitted belonged to the convicted spy, had been tampered with; that false letters had been soldered onto the keys; that the Woodstock typewriter company could not have manufactured the machine; because the steel used in the keys was of varied texture and not the type used by the company.

These arguments, too, were knocked down by investigation and reason. We'll go into that next.

My New York

—By Mel Heimer

New York — The Copacabana is a downstairs saloon in East 60th street, just off Fifth avenue, that has made a great deal of money for its assorted owners—I know that Monte Proser was one, once, but I have no idea whose money is in the joint now—by practicing the gambler's old adage about it being necessary to spend money to make money. Years ago, these owners dug up a fine dance band, led by Mike Durso—what they call a society orchestra, which means that at least once a night it plays just One of Those Things and Stardust and they paid out good, green gelt for a row of handsome chorines and for big main attractions like Sinatra, Eckstine, Joe E. Lewis, Durante and so on. They spent it, and they raked it in.

There was a time when it was my personal favorite among saloons because it is dark, the food is pretty good, the liquor is not cut noticeably and it is full of Broadway characters, mixing it with the butter-and-egg men and their wives from out of town just as if that sort of thing is done daily.

I guess there was a time when it was the only place in New York that really had a clientele composed of everybody, socialite and sharpie alike. "What a raffish place, really," the socialite would say, but whenever Durante or Lewis was there, I would notice the socialite, too.

I bring up the name of this eating and drinking den because these days it has been presenting a 19-year-old comedian named Joel Gray, who some of my more intellectual colleagues tell me is a sensation. I believe the word is.

I have not seen Mr. Gray perform, because while I still try to catch up with the Copa shows, I do so usually about two days from the end of the new show, when it no longer is new and the performers are plodding grimly through their three routines a night before grabbing the 20th Century for Chicago and Chez Paree, the next stop on the list.

However, I have been pondering Mr. Gray, who they tell me is about 5 feet tall and looks like an adolescent Fannie Brice. Nineteen, nineteen, and making somewhere between $600 and $1,000 a week. I should guess. Durante makes $5,000 but Mr. Gray is a newcomer and this is summer and there is nothing wrong with young comic making a grand a week.

When you stop to figure the way it must feel to be adrift in Manhattan at 19, with a $1,000 a week in salary and the stature of tap comic in the city most solvent nightclub, it's a heady thing. I remember at 19 I was working as a political reporter on the Macy newspapers in Westchester county, making around $22 a week and feeling pretty lousy because I could buy beer for my pals at high school days who were caught up tight in the depression and had to sell apples at political rallies in Madison Square Garden to make a buck.

However, even if the government racks up a lot of that grand a week, you still have a lot left over. Suppose that when Mr. Gray—Master Gray, I guess—gets through paying his agent and his tailor bills and his writers, if he has any, he still gets to keep $300 or so free and clear.

Fifteen weeks of that kind of loot and he can afford a Jaguar XK-120. Another 30 and he can buy a small yacht. He can set the boys in Lindy's up for drinks for the house and there are at least 1,000 women of pleasing appearance—one for each dollar of that grand a week—who would love to dine with him at night.

Well—I don't want to wax too philosophical, but what I have been wondering is, do you think

Looking At Life —by Erich Brandeis

With all due respect to Plato, Kant, Adam or any of the other famous philosophers—some of the shrewdest bits of philosophy—are the a few thoughts of prisoners in our jails—after they are caught.

A criminal when it is too late—will make surprisingly keen observations on all phases of life. Every criminal is innocent according to his own protestations. It is always the other fellow who has "done it."

Or unfortunate circumstances, according to him, may have led him unwillingly and unknowingly into the commitment of an act for which he will now have to pay the penalty unless a good lawyer—or "mouthpiece" as he calls him—can PROVE his innocence.

One morning I visited the San Francisco City prison.

Having been a police reporter many years back, I am still interested in police stations, jails, morgues and the like, and usually manage to look them up in the more interesting towns.

San Francisco is doubly interesting to me since I once spent the happiest days of my life in the city prison.

Mr. Gray gets the seam boot out of being 19 and adrift in New York that a 19-year-old who does make $22 a week (or its present-day equivalent, about $80) gets?

The 19-year-old nobody works from 9 to 5 as an office boy or a clerk in a wholesale dress shop, and at 5 he ducks out of the place and has a beer with the boys at the place next door.

Mr. Gray, on the other hand, turns up at the Copa around 8:30 every night, including Sunday, and works to about 3 a. m. He has to be funny always—in the face of rattling dishes, clinking glasses and the bitter, slack meanness of ringleaders, who are bad enough to old campaign-ers like Joe E. Lewis but who must be frightening and deadly to a 19-year-old.

For Mr. Gray, there always will be chorus girls around, eyeing him speculatively, or faded blond hangers-on who pinch his cheek and say "Honey you're so cute!" He makes 1,000 bucks a week and there is a line as long as your arm of cheap and broken-down souls to get their hands on it.

Don't misunderstand me, please. I had the "police beat," and the city jail was my headquarters. We reporters had a royal time in those days. Young, ambitious, usually broke, we made the best of every day and particularly of every night. But that is another story.

So I went back there—to find a new jailer, new guards, everything new and unfamiliar.

But one of the old guards was still there.

"Anything doing this morning?" I asked him, just as I had asked so often when he was younger and I was young.

I was happy to see that he recognized me. Several of my old friends in San Francisco did not. After the first greetings, he said "Come on. I want you to meet a character."

He took me to the visitor's room and brought out a fellow by the name of—oh, let's forget about the name. It doesn't matter.

This fellow had been arrested with a suitcase containing $58,401 in cash—the remainder of $90,000 loot from a robbery in Reading, Pa.

He and a pal had broken into the house of a wealthy widow, who kept $180,000 in a wooden strong box.

They split the money and each went his way.

The pal was caught quickly. He had given $20 tips to waitresses and hat-check girls. The police wanted to know "how come?" and pinched him. He too was caught, and was waiting for the Reading police to come and get him.

Was he guilty? Not by any means, he said. He simply got tired of work. He wanted to be one of the "crowd," a regular fellow. So he committed a little burglary—stole only from a rich woman. No harm done.

"Walk softly, I said to myself. Keep out of trouble. Be inconspicuous. TIPTOE THROUGH LIFE."

That was his philosophy. As long as it lasted, everything was fine. Then he started to get foolish. In a couple of months he spent $31,600.

He had stopped "tipping" — and wound up in jail.

I guess a lot of people wish they had kept on "walking softly" and "tipping through life," before it becomes too late.

Hollywood

—by Gene Handsaker

Hollywood—"The Big Sky" is a big, pretentious, outdoor drama marked by rugged scenery and little suspense. A slim character actor named Arthur Hunnicutt, who retains the drawl of his native Gravelly, Ark. (population 200), steals the picture.

Kirk Douglas is nominally the star of this story of fur-traders plying up the Missouri River into Blackfoot-infested Montana Territory. But Hunnicutt, as the expedition's shrewd and seasoned leader, emerges as a big-time player of the salty, good-in-any emergency character.

The film was photographed largely in Wyoming's Grand Teton National Park. Douglas and newcomer Dewey Martin, a former theater usher here, are adventurers who join the expedition. Elizabeth Thrall, a half-Cherokee New York fashion model, plays a Blackfoot hostage who is supposed to guarantee safe passage through Indian country.

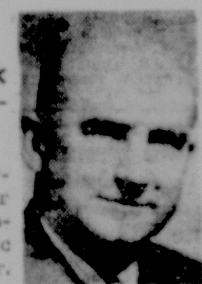

Little occasional skirmishes and minor crises fail to generate much excitement in this more than two-hour film. The supporting cast includes Buddy Bear as a member of the expedition, Jim Davis as leader of the villains, and Hank Worden as a friendly, dimwitted Blackfoot. But Hunnicutt, who had smaller parts in "Broken Arrow," "Red Badge of Courage," and other films, is the brightest star of "The Big Sky."

The Once Over

—by H. I. Phillips

Letters for Special Delivery

Dear Professor Einstein: I am still thinking over the answer you gave to a man who wrote you asking your opinion on flying saucers. "These people have seen something. What it is I do not know, and I am not curious in knowing," was your complete, concise and all-informative reply. Never has a flying saucer been given such a brush-off. Those things will know their place from now on. I am also sure that you have given a new technique to the countless quiz program contestants who are fumbling all over the lot instead of coming out with a clear, sharp ring answer to a plain question and no beating around the bush.

A man tells you about the thousands of people all over the U.S.A. who have seen flying saucers and asks an opinion. Do you quibble? Do you hem and haw? Do you ask time to go to the library or write a letter to the editor? No prompting, please? Not a chance, Professor. Your answer is swift: "These people have seen something." You don't even hide behind "No comment." Whatever they have seen it is "something," you state without fear of contradiction, and you have something there, Professor.

With that cleared up, you tackle the next question, "What was it they saw?" and again you come out of your corner swinging. "What it is I do not know," you answer firmly. Not stalling and no waiting for a hint. (So many people give rash answers like, "I think they saw saucers," or "Maybe they represent phenomena.") Naturally, the third question of your recent correspondent was, "What are you doing to do it all out?"

with a bottle of rye. Marilyn, recently released from a mental hospital, takes him for her fieriest sweetheart who died in a crash.

Seeking to keep others from interrupting, she conks a bellhop with an ash tray, trusses up her baby-sitting charge (Donna Corcoran), and starts pandemonium in the hotel. Widmark, agast at the mess he finds himself in, convinces his bar-singer girlfriend (Anne Bancroft) that he has a heart after all. This is pretty taut and grim stuff, but at least it should keep your mind off any other worries you may have.

CUTIES

Once more your mind flashes the reply, "I am not curious to know." Translated to plain language for the flying saucer groups that boils down to "Phoney on flying saucers! Can't you see I'm busy?" Your ultimatum to any and all saucers is a firm "GET LOST!"

This is not a nice way to treat saucers. It is being pretty short with them, giving them the bum's rush and heave-ho like that. But I feel better, professor. (If Albert Einstein ain't worried over flying saucers, why should I be?) However, I am suspicious. I have a hunch you know all about them and have studied them as they flew over Princeton express to Washington and scattered points. You have fallen a victim of American quiz programs. And you are just holding out until somebody raises the jackpot to $10,000, a year's free use of Sheffield Scientific School and your theory of relativity painted inside and out. I am a hard saucer-watcher to fool.

Love and kisses, Elmer.

Three-Year-Old Transue Girl Killed In Fall From Crib

Child Dies Of Neck Fracture

Connie Lee Transue, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Transue, of Stroudsburg RD 2, died yesterday as the result of a fall from her crib, authorities reported last night.

William Walton, of Stroudsburg, appointed acting coroner by Dr. W. E. Andrews, issued the certificate that the child died of a fractured neck.

Stroudsburg State police, who investigated, said the mother told them she was hanging wash in the back yard when she heard a "thud." She dashed into the home and found the child on the floor. Mrs. Transue called a physician, and an ambulance was summoned from the General Hospital, East Stroudsburg, but the child died before it reached there.

It was not known whether the child was killed instantly. The mother said the accident occurred about 8:50 a. m. Connie Lee became three years old July 26.

Surviving are her parents; a half-brother, William Gaskill; maternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fick, of Bartonsville, and paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Transue, of East Stroudsburg.

Funeral services will be held at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow at the Gantzhorn funeral home, Tannersville. Rev. William F. Wunder, pastor of Grace Lutheran Church, East Stroudsburg, will officiate. Interment will be in Tannersville Cemetery.

Friends may call at the funeral home tonight after 7.

Three Slain By Robbers

Lurs, France (AP)—Sir Jack Drummond, 61, Britain's noted World War II food planner, his pretty wife and their 11-year-old daughter were brutally slain early yesterday in the foothills of the French Alps where they were vacationing.

Police said robbery appeared to be the motive. Money and suitcases are missing.

A volley of shots were heard about 1 a. m. by a farmer living nearby. Up and doing his chores four hours later, he found the body of the child, Elizabeth, lying at the side of the highway near which the Drummonds had been camping. Her skull was shattered.

One-hundred-seventy yards up the road, next to their automobile, lay the body of Lady Drummond, the former Anne Wilbraham who collaborated in Sir Jack's writings. She was shot through the heart.

Across the highway, next to a highway market, was the body of Sir Jack, dressed only in blue pajama trousers. He had been slain by three bullets. His body was covered by a camp cot.

A policeman, diving into the nearby Durance River, found what authorities believe was the death weapon—an American Army carbine. Part of the stock was found near the body of Elizabeth. Apparently she had been struck by repeated blows of such force as to splinter the gun's wood butt.

A police dog, searching for clues, led police to a railroad where the scent was lost. Near Digne, some 20 miles away, the uniform of a deserter from the desert-tough French Foreign Legion was found later. In it was a letter addressed to an Italian, born in Genoa. Police were unable immediately to connect the uniform with the slayings.

Sir Jack, a tall, spare, modest man, was scientific adviser to the Ministry of Food during the war. He gave Britons a balanced diet—short on taste, but long on nutrition.

Light Showers Fail To Alleviate Conditions In Drought-Stricken Sections Of Country

By The Associated Press
Residents of the drought areas in New England and the South looked skyward for a sign of rain yesterday without avail.

Nature seemed bent on teasing instead of appeasing. She produced some showers, but they were widely scattered and too light to help the crops or to soak tinder-dry woodlands. The drought which began in mid-June has destroyed more than a half-billion dollars worth of corn, tobacco, cotton and vegetable crops in the Southeast and has burned pastures so dry that farmers have dumped their beef cattle on the market by the thousands to keep them from starving.

In the Northeast, the danger of serious forest fires mounted, and heavy crop losses increased.

Agriculture Department officials were to meet in Atlanta, Ga., today and Thursday to discuss ways of getting immediate disaster loans to farmers of eight drought-stricken Southeastern states.

So far all or large parts of 12 states have been designated disaster areas by the government. This permits farmers who suffer substantial losses to obtain quick credit loans from the Farmers Home Administration.

The Interstate Commerce Commission has authorized cut-rate railway transportation rates on hay shipped into most of the stricken Southeastern states but railroads said Tuesday they didn't plan to go along.

The Western Traffic Association, an organization representing 47 railroads operating west of the Mississippi River, issued a statement in Chicago, saying it was "obliged to refuse." It added: "Rates on hay already are on a low basis."

A few showers and storms hit some sections of the drought-pinched states. Nearly two inches of rain fell in the middle Atlantic states and were expected to continue today. Fair, pleasant weather prevailed from the Rockies westward.

Over the Southeast, very light, scattered showers were due to continue through today, but no general rains were expected.

Elsewhere, some widely scattered light showers were reported in the Great Plains, moving eastward into the upper Mississippi Valley today. Other showers fell in the middle Atlantic states and were expected to continue today. Fair, pleasant weather prevailed from the Rockies westward.

Crash Victim Still Critical At Hospital

A woman critically injured in a crash at Millhoney Monday night had been the object of a "missing persons" search, Brodheads State police revealed yesterday.

Mrs. Betty Jones, 24, of 338 Wyoming Ave., Kingston, Pa., is at General Hospital, East Stroudsburg, suffering from serious injuries to the head and face, lost teeth and cuts and bruises.

Her condition late last night was regarded as "still critical" by hospital authorities.

The woman was alone in the car which went out of control on Route 115 at 10:10 Monday night, plunged across the grassed triangular island at the highway junction, crossed Route 209, smashed through a three-foot-high stone wall east of Chestnut Hill Inn and went over a 20-foot embankment. She was identified yesterday by her father, Joshua Bryant of Kingston.

Bryant told police he had filed a missing persons report on his daughter with the Kingston police department at 10:40 Monday night several hours after she failed to return home.

According to Bryant, Mrs. Jones received a money order from her husband in New York State. Shortly after 8:30 p. m. she borrowed the car of Fred Kuhn, Patchogue, N. Y., a bicycle salesman who was visiting her father. She said she was going out to cash the money order, Bryant recalled.

Investigation showed Mrs. Jones cashed the money order at a Kingston telegraph office at 9 p. m. The crash occurred an hour and 10 minutes later—about 50 miles from home.

State Sets Up Quarantine Against Swine

Harrisburg (AP)—The State Agriculture Department yesterday banned importation of swine into Pennsylvania except those animals intended for immediate slaughter.

Quarantine action is for protection of the state's livestock industry against a new and costly disease of swine that has not as yet appeared in Pennsylvania," said Miles Horst, state agriculture secretary.

Horst said the disease is known as vesicular exanthema and now exists in 20 states, including four counties in New Jersey and one each in New York and Ohio.

"Of immediate concern to the livestock industry of Pennsylvania is the fact that the disease, in its early stages, so closely resembles foot and mouth disease that every precaution must be taken," he explained.

East Stroudsburg Council Votes To Extend Pension System To Borough Employees

Social security for borough employees and officers of East Stroudsburg was approved by council last night.

The step was taken when council approved two ordinances. The main one authorizes the borough to enter agreements with the State, as agent for the Social Security Agency, to set up participation in the Old Age and Survivors Insurance system, to make necessary payroll deductions of premiums, and to pay out the matching funds required of the borough.

The second ordinance approved was made necessary because the law requires that when the social security agreement is signed with the State, no other pension fund be in existence for the employees involved.

There has been a police pension fund in effect in the borough since 1945. The ordinance adopted last night repeals the police pension fund ordinance.

This, however, is on a temporary basis. In effect, the police pension fund will be placed "on the hook" until after social security is set up for police and other borough employees. Then the pension fund for police will be restored to the former basis, and the money already paid in will remain in the fund.

Council elected to date the agreement back to Jan. 1, 1951. The borough must then put in enough money to cover retroactive payments to that date. The result will give employees and officers an "extra" year of social security which they would not otherwise receive.

The sums involved were not settled at last night's session. They will depend on the number of employees brought under the set-up and this will not be determined until council decides how many employees and officers will be eligible.

Other business: A garbage contract for two years was awarded to Harold A. Schick, Mount Pocono, whose bid of $15,816 was the only one received. The figure is a rise over the contract for the last two years which cost $12,800.

The treasurer's report showed $33,423.56 in the water fund; $3,846.30 in the general fund; $2,444.61 in the highway fund; and parking meter receipts at $1,410.12.

Washington (AP)—Signum Fabisiak, Communist Poland's consul general in Chicago, told the State Department yesterday he has quit his post and asked permission to remain in the United States as a political refugee.

Indications were that asylum would be granted Fabisiak and his family in accordance with long-established precedent in such cases.

Fabisiak submitted the request in a long letter, stating why he broke with the Communist regime in his homeland.

At the same time Polish Ambassador Jozef Winiewicz gave formal notice that the Polish diplomatic passports of Mr. and Mrs. Fabisiak and Mrs. Helen Ludwig, a household employee, were being cancelled. The Fabisiaks have two minor daughters.

Sanitary Features Emphasized

Grind it, shred it, pulverize it. That's the way more and more garbage is being handled every day. The growing popularity of electric garbage disposal units is in full evidence at the National Plumbing and Heating Exposition in Chicago.

Seven manufacturers displayed various types and models of garbage disposal units. Regardless of the particular make or model of these appliances, they are all labor savers and they all can claim many healthful advantages, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau.

Electric garbage disposal units reduce the possibility of diseases spread by rodents and insects since no garbage is collected in cans or bags.

Furthermore, mechanical garbage grinders are self-cleaning and therefore eliminate odors or vegetable deterioration around the sink.

Electric garbage grinders will fit most sinks. All have safety devices, as for example, a cover over the drain without which the unit will not operate. This device forestalls the possibility of accidents caused by a youngster's curiosity.

Waste disposal units will not only grind up garbage but they will also handle bones, cellophane, paper, coffee grounds, and other kitchen waste.

Light Deemed Essential For Basement Rooms

When remodeling the basement to create a recreation or play room, special consideration must be given to lighting and ventilation. A play room with insufficient natural light and poor ventilation will not only be unhealthy, but will lack the appeal of a sunlit room.

Because basements are often below the ground level, window openings are apt to be comparatively small. For that reason architects advise choosing windows with a maximum glass area, thus obtaining a maximum amount of light. Several types of metal windows meet these specifications, the strength of materials used in their construction permitting a greater proportionate glass area than in other kinds of windows.

Side-hung single or double steel casement windows but two feet in depth may be used when there is little room between the ground level and the ceiling of the play room. If there is even less room, top or bottom hinged windows that range from a depth of about one foot are available. These may be had to open either in or outward.

In some instances it may be advisable to make provisions for window wells. A portion of the masonry under the old window may be removed and the opening equipped with smart appearing steel casements. To get a maximum of light it is frequently worthwhile to paint the walls of the well in a bright color. This assures maximum reflection of light.

If there is an open fireplace in the recreation room an attractive arrangement is to flank the chimney on either side with steel casement windows. This is found to add materially to the charm and livability of the room.

Most Homes Need Room For Child

There are children in most American homes, but paradoxically there is no room for a child in the average house.

Of course he has a bedroom, but a growing child needs a room that is more than a room for sleeping. He needs a room that is distinctly his own.

In planning a child's room, first thought should be given to ruggedness and easy cleaning. Walls should be washable and floors smooth but slip-proof and of a material that will not show wear. Since all children love bright colors, distinctive color treatments should be used.

It is important that large amounts of storage space be provided. Deep cupboards lining the wall at window sill height are practical. The tops are ideal for displaying handiwork and cherished mementoes. Bookshelves also can be built onto the tops of these cupboards.

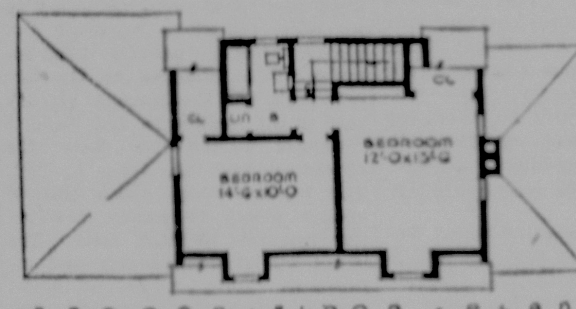

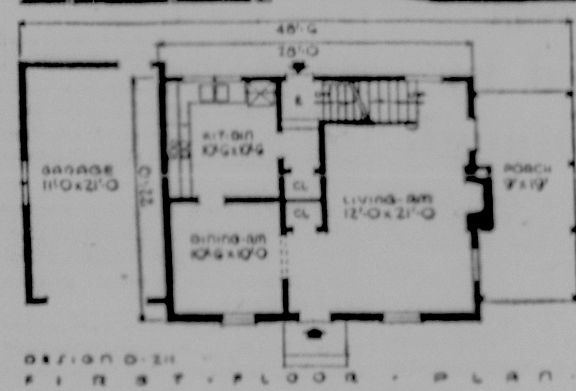

In most cases an uninteresting bedroom can be remodeled at low cost and the child's happiness will be a rich reward.

Painting Porch

The best time to paint a porch floor is during warm weather after several dry days. The cracks between the boards are widest then and they should be filled with a crack filler. No paint should be applied until the filler has dried.

Tightening Hammer

Shrunk by drying, a hammer handle will tighten its grip on the hammer if it is soaked in warm water.

THE DUNA is a story and a half colonial with three rooms on the first floor, two bedrooms and a bath on the second, an attached garage and a porch.

As shown, the dining room and living room are joined by a cased opening, but the partition can be left out to form an L-shaped combination living-dining room.

Cabinets are placed on two walls to permit space for kitchen dining. The double compartment sink is under the rear window, the refrigerator to the right and the range in the counter to the left.

Use Roller Applier

Roller type paint appliers now can be used with any interior paint. At first recommended for painting walls and ceilings with oil base paints and enamels, manufacturers now announce that this roller works equally well with water base paints and new rubber base paints.

Extra Shelves Handy

A kitchen base cabinet may be given greater usefulness if one or two additional shelves are inserted. On these shelves, which may be about four inches apart, may be placed narrow utensils such as skillets, platters, cookie trays and the like. Being removable, these shelves are unusually functional.

Wishing Well

Here is a permanent wishing well that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you.

Good Garden Hose Deserves Right Care

Good garden hose is an important investment but it will last for years if given reasonable care.

When a hose gets dirty, clean it with plain water only, not with soap or detergents. And don't try to renew the surface with ordinary home polishing wax.

Drain the hose thoroughly and wipe it clean before reeling it.

Never coil or bend a frozen hose. Never hang it over a nail; use a reel or rack.

Never kink the hose to shut off the flow of water, and don't shut off the water at the hose nozzle for long periods.

Don't run over the hose with a car or wheelbarrow; if it's in the line of lawn or garden traffic, protect it with a simple wooden bridge.

Do not drop or drag hose couplings on the ground or pavement. The most critical part of a hose is the end which is attached to the faucet or sill cock. Sharp twists, bends and kinks can be avoided by using one of the new swivel goose-neck connections and snap-on couplings.

Broken Lawn Area Proves Job To Mow

Every tree, shrub or garden bed located in the lawn area is something to be mowed around—and usually requires the attention of hand clippers to make it look trimmed and cared-for.

It's easier on the home owner to keep fussy chores to a minimum by making a few larger beds, rather than several small ones, and to place those bushes and shrubs along the outside edges.

Besides, breaking up the place into small areas makes it look smaller and cluttered. Even if its small, give the place as large a sweep as possible.

Housing Need Persists

The backlog of demand for new homes is large enough to warrant building at a high level during the next few years, reports the National Association of Home Builders. Statistics show that at least one million families need new housing each year.

Right Placing Of Fan Keeps Home Cooler

Refresher course: To keep you cool, calm and collected on hot, humid days and nights, the air must circulate in a room at least once every two minutes. . . . When you're hot, your body is blanketed by a layer of stagnant air. Air can absorb only so much moisture, and the batch surrounding you is already full of it. You, therefore, are not only hot, but sticky and sluggish, and in some cases "all in."

To get direct and quick relief, place your electric fan 2 to 5 feet above the floor and 6 or 10 feet away from you. . . . For indirect air movements place the fan a foot from the wall and let its stream play directly on the surface. This achieves a more gentle circulation, but it has been found to be thorough and just as effective, if slower.

On an excessively hot night, put the fan, facing outward, on a table about 3 feet in front of an open window. Then open the other windows or doors. The fan will drive out the day's accumulation of inactive air and replace it with fresh, invigorating currents. Placement of the fan a few feet in front of the window has just been revealed as greatly increasing the fan's air exhaust capacity for night cooling.

Larger Fuel Supply Urged

Fuel experts advise home owners to increase their facilities for fuel storage. With a substantial backlog on hand, the householder will have a buffer against temporary shortages and price rises.

Many home owners are replacing smaller oil tanks with 1000 to 1800-gallon tanks, says the Plumbing and Heating Industries Bureau. These larger tanks will take care of the major portion of the year's supply of fuel oil.

Larger tanks or coal bins need not take up precious space in a basement or utility room. They may be located under the driveway with a top opening for filling.

Keep Brushes Clean

Always clean brushes thoroughly immediately after using. When a brush has been cleaned and is not to be used for awhile, wrap it in heavy paper. Be sure to leave ample room so the paper won't bend the ends of the bristles.

This achieves a more gentle circulation, but it has been found to be thorough and just as effective, if slower.

On an excessively hot night, put the fan, facing outward, on a table about 3 feet in front of an open window. Then open the other windows or doors. The fan will drive out the day's accumulation of inactive air and replace it with fresh, invigorating currents. Placement of the fan a few feet in front of the window has just been revealed as greatly increasing the fan's air exhaust capacity for night cooling.

ANTIQUES AND ANTIQUARIANS find a common meeting place at the Pocono Antique Show which opened a four-day session in the Armory at East Stroudsburg yesterday under the auspices of the General Hospital Auxiliary.

Antique Show Draws Record Crowd Here

One of the biggest opening day crowds of its eight-year history yesterday thronged the Armory, Washington St., East Stroudsburg for the annual Pocono Mountains Antique Show and Sale sponsored by the General Hospital Auxiliary for the benefit of the hospital here.

Members of the auxiliary, staffing the reception desk, found themselves registering visitors from many states. A few of the entries included Scranton, Williamsport, Doylestown, Berwick, Wilkes-Barre, Allentown, Harrisburg, Lansdowne in Pennsylvania; Charleston, Ill.; Washington, D. C.; Woodstown, N. J.; Long Island, New York City all registering within an hour of the opening.

Other members of the auxiliary were busy at the cafeteria in the basement where they served sandwiches, soups, and light lunches. Mrs. W. Grady Moore, Mrs. Theodore Moore, Mrs. William Gorman, Mrs. Edward Eckert, Mrs. Nathan Meyer composed yesterday's lunch committee with Miss Nora Leffler as cashier and Miss Mary Ann Bosman and Miss Mildred Kulp assisting with the serving.

Another group will be on duty today when the feature of the menu will be baked ham.

On the floor of the show itself, the Girl Scouts were doing a brisk business in their soft-drink and ice cream booth, staffed by the afternoon by Kay Lesoine and Joan Smith, and at night by Sue Ellenberger and other Girl Scouts.

Main attention, however, was focused on the exhibits themselves arranged in more than 40 booths by dealers from many states.

Such family heirlooms as canoes and lockets, family silver and priceless China, mingled with what must have once been merely amusing trivia—mechanical banks and souvenir plates, china spinners and iron trolley cars, ancient maps and old Valentines.

Values ranged from hand-fashioned cookie cutters to furniture and china running into the hundreds of dollars. There are white wrought-iron benches and cherry tables, Dresden china figurines and colored hand-blown glass; old 17th century prints and small pot-bellied stoves.

Since in one visit to the show, people found it impossible to see all they'd like to see, there promises to be many repeat visitors as well as newcomers during the remaining days of the show, which will close Friday night. The show is open from 1 to 10:30 p. m. each day.

Kroboth-Heine Wedding Held

Portland — Miss Theresa K. Heine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Heine and William Kroboth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kroboth, all of Portland were married on Saturday in St. Vincent's Catholic Church here.

Rev. George Krock performed the ceremony, with Michael Moroschen as organist and Miss Marilyn Hunt as vocalist.

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and wore a gown of nylon tulle and Chantilly lace over satin, with a square neckline, fitted tucked bodice, long sleeves and a bouffant tulle skirt with panels of lace, and a satin and tulle train. A tiara of pearls held her fingertip veil and her bouquet was of white orchids, roses and baby's breath.

Miss Dolores Kerr as maid of honor wore a gown of blue net over tulle with a matching picture hat and a bouquet of yellow roses and baby's breath.

Anthony Ianno, brother-in-law of the bridegroom, was the best man. A reception was held at Charles Inn, Delaware Water Gap, and Mr. and Mrs. Kroboth left for a wedding trip to the New England States and Canada. On their return they will make their home in Mount Bethel.

OLD ENOUGH TO BE HER grandmother is the doll which Ruth Wolff, of Elkins Park, is holding at the Antique Show at the Armory. Ruth is 9 years old, and a guest at Camp Tamiment.

'Doc Susie' Going Strong After 50 Years As Medic

By Eugene Foster

AP Newsfeature

Fraser, Colo.—In August 1907, a frail little lady in her middle 30s stepped off a train in this mountain-locked hamlet 74 miles west of Denver to regain her health and "prove that a woman can be a doctor."

Dr. Susan Anders has been treating the sick and injured here continuously for the last 45 years and, at 81, is still the only physician for the 250 persons who live in this gateway to Colorado's rugged Middle Park area 9,000 and more feet above sea level.

They refer to her affectionately as "Doc Susie."

"I've never regretted living here," she said, brushing a wispy of grey hair away from her eyes, "except for the winters which are long and severe."

Doc Susie's first patient was a horse which had cut himself on a barbed wire fence.

"Every time I stitched up that wound," she recalled with a smile that deepened the wrinkles in her sun-tanned face, "the horse yanked the stitches out with his teeth, but I pulled him through."

She has used every conveyance—sleigh, skis, snowshoes, horses and the automobile—for her ministrations of mercy through the mountains with temperatures as low as 50 degrees below zero and blizzards raging "so hard I couldn't see the horses in front of the sleigh for the snow." Doc Susie even hiked up a 13,000-foot mountain uncountable times to put splints on the broken arms and legs of lumber workers.

"I can't even carry the clothing now that I used to have to wear," she declared as she revived in memory the hardships of pursuing her profession on the pine-scented Western Slope of the Continental Divide.

Doc Susie never kept tab on the number of babies she's brought into the world, but she's willing to wager they'd add up to

Name Judges For Pocono Flower Show

Tannersville — Plans for the Pocono Garden Club's flower show to be held at the Tannersville firehouse on August 13 and 14, are progressing, and judges have been named for the various classes.

Rev. Frank Blatt, of Stroudsburg, will judge specimens and Mrs. William Miller and Mrs. Serfass of Carbon County will be judges for the arrangement classes.

John Ruehl, of the Dutch Bulb Import Co., Cherry Lane, will arrange a display of tuberosus begonias.

A reception was held in the Blue Valley farm show building, and Mr. and Mrs. Ashman are now honeymooning in the Poconos.

On their return they will make their home with the bridegroom's parents. Mr. Ashman is employed by the J. T. Baker Chemical Co., and his bride by Russo and Son.

The scripture lesson was read by Mrs. Samuel Dunbar, and a Bible quiz was conducted by Mrs. Starnier.

The class accepted an invitation from the Hamilton Square Sunday School class taught by William Lesh to join them at a picnic at Mr. Lesh's home on Tuesday, August 12.

Refreshments were served by Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Cyphers.

Those in attendance were: Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Starnier, Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Cyphers, Mrs. Thomas G. Hawkes, Mr. Richard Metzgar, Mrs. Daisy Allegor, Mrs. Margaret Halstead and Mrs. Samuel Dunbar.

Dr. Anderson turned to nursing and later moved to Greeley, Colo., where overwork resulted in a breakdown.

"I moved to Fraser," she said, "and worked in a grocery store to earn a living while recuperating. Word that she was a licensed physician got around and emergency calls soon led to full practice."

"Just plain, practical medicine for the benefit of people," Dr. Anderson never married. "I could have," she chuckled, "if I hadn't flown off the handle so much and said 'poor' too many times."

A rustic four-room log cabin near the edge of town has been home to Doc Susie since 1910. "Over there," she said, pointing with her cane to a mountain east of the doorstep, "you can see the cut of Corona Pass."

That was the switchback route used by the old Moffat Railroad to cross the Continental Divide before the famed Moffat tunnel was drilled to take the grunting locomotives and creaking railroad cars off the mountain's back.

On June 14, 1947, Dr. Anderson was made a member of The Emeritus Club of the Alumni Association of Michigan University, marking the 50th anniversary of the graduation of her class.

Gazing thoughtfully toward the tree-dotted mountainside and gently rubbing the gold "Emeritus" pin, she whispered: "Just 50 years of good hard work."

Efforts to become established in her profession they met with failure, however, "because people just didn't believe in women doctors."

But in other cases, I think the owners would be merely amused to see with what care the old flour scoop has been polished to a sheen, and how the women "oh" over the old washstand and its pitcher and bowl.

And certainly the senders of those ancient Valentines must wonder at folk who buy them, complete with sentiments never intended for them.

Makes you wonder what home, every-day article around your house will be so sought-after a hundred years from now. Can't imagine them clamoring for an early plastic dish scraper, but you never can tell.

Rebekahs Friday — Rachel Brodhead Rebekah Lodge will meet Friday night at 8 at the Fort Penn Lodge hall. A demonstration will follow the business meeting.

Edna Moyer Engaged To Wed Joseph Cerino — Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Honey, of Pen Argil, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Edna Moyer, to Joseph Cerino Jr., son of Joseph Cerino, of Bangor.

Both Miss Moyer and Mr. Cerino attended Bangor High School. He is now employed by Collins and Maxwell, contractors.

Needed: Sewing Machine To Help Clothe 4 Children

A mother with four young children is asking only for help to help herself. Through Mrs. Ida M. Kunkle of the Monroe County Chapter of the American Red Cross, a request has been issued for a sewing machine.

It can be of any type so long as it is in working order, and she can make over clothes for the youngsters before chilly weather sets in. Anyone with a sewing machine they wish to give may call Mrs. Kunkle at the Red Cross headquarters, 357.

The local chapter has also received an urgent request for mattresses for both a single bed and a double bed and will welcome calls from people who can fulfill this urgent need.

W. Bangor Church Is Scene Of Ashman Wedding

Bangor — St. Roch's Catholic Church, West Bangor, was the scene of the wedding of Miss Ida Perinotto, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Orlando Perinotto, of Bangor RD3 to John Ashman, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Ashman, of Pen Argil on Saturday morning.

Rev. James P. Gallagher performed the ceremony, and music was provided by Miss Virginia Williams and the church choir.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a period gown of Alencon lace over satin with a basque bodice and bouffant skirt. Her two-tiered veil of nylon tulle fell from a cap of matching lace and pearls and she carried a bouquet of white asters.

Her attendants, including her sister, Miss Sylvia Perinotto as maid of honor, and Miss Joanne Ashman sister of the bridegroom and Miss Norma Segatti, wore identical gowns of nylon tulle and lace with spencer jackets. Their headbands were of baby's breath and they carried white gladioli with ivy.

A reception was held in the Blue Valley farm show building, and Mr. and Mrs. Ashman are now honeymooning in the Poconos.

On their return they will make their home with the bridegroom's parents. Mr. Ashman is employed by the J. T. Baker Chemical Co., and his bride by Russo and Son.

St. Ann's Church Scene Of Magann-Wright Wedding

Barratt — Miss Jacqueline Wright, daughter of Mrs. Ann Wright, of 510 West 140th St., New York City, became the bride of Wolden Magann, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Magann of Mountainhome, on Saturday morning, August 2, at St. Ann's Church, Canadensis.

Rev. Joseph Connor, of New York City, performed the ceremony, and Mrs. Harry Shinnen, of Onawa Lodge, played the organ. The church was decorated with bouquets of gladioli.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Charles Edward Wright, of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., wore a full length gown of Chantilly lace, buttoned down the front. The bodice had a high collar and a waistline tapering to a V in front and back over the skirt of lace over satin held out with a hoop. Her veil of matching lace was scattered with mother of pearl and held by a beaded wreath. She carried a white prayerbook with a white orchid with purple lip and a spray.

Miss Doreen Wright, sister of the bride, of New York City, wore a gown of blue nylon tulle, with a bandeau of yellow carnations matching her yellow carnation bouquet. The flower girl, Joy Wright, another sister of the bride, wore a white organdy gown over a blue underskirt of tulle, and a bandeau of pink and white carnations matching her bouquet of mixed carnations.

John Sengle, of Mountainhome, was best man, and the ushers were Walt Lewis, of Ephrata and William Sengle Jr., of Mountainhome.

The bride's mother wore a cocktail-length dress of tan gabardine with matching hat, brown shoes and gloves and a corsage of orchids. The bridegroom's mother wore a floral print dress on a white ground in the same length with white hat and silver shoes and an orchid corsage.

A lawn reception had been planned at the bridegroom's home but because of the rain, it was held in the basement of the Mountainhome Methodist Church for about 70 guests. Decorations were formed by white wedding bells and streamers. A 20-pound cake baked by Oren Stiff, of Stroudsburg, formed the centerpiece.

After the reception Mr. and Mrs. Magann left for a wedding trip through New York State and Canada and planned a stop-over at Penn State, the bridegroom's alma mater. For traveling, the bride chose a black faille suit with white choker pearls, black shoes and gloves, and a white hat trimmed in black.

They will make their home at 66 Clinton St., Farmingdale, Long Island, N. Y.

The bride, a graduate of St. Anthony's High School, N. Y., is a telephone operator in New York. Mr. Magann, who was graduated from Barratt High School and Pennsylvania State College, is an aeronautical engineer at Republic Aircraft in New York.

Among the guests were Mrs. Stanley Dickman, of Fort Lauderdale, and Miss Patricia Wright, of West Virginia, both sisters of the bride, and her brother and sister-in-law, Dr. and Mrs. Edmund Magann, of Stroudsburg.

Bangor Couple Celebrate 50th Anniversary

Bangor — Mr. and Mrs. Philip Sabatino, of 338 Broadway, Bangor, celebrated their 50th anniversary yesterday with the tribute of their many friends there and in Roseto where Mr. Sabatino was one of the business and civic leaders.

Born in Roseto Valfortore, Italy, 72 years ago, Mr. Sabatino came here at the age of 11, settling in what is now known as East Bangor. At the age of 18 he began his business career with a confectionary and fruit store in Bangor, opening a general store in Roseto three years later.

Simultaneously he served as assistant superintendent for the Star quarry, and later as foreman of the East Bangor-Portland trolley line and the Roseto reservoir.

He built the area's first shirt factory, helped to build and operate a motion picture theater and helped organize the First National Bank of Roseto which he served as president from 1927 until it closed in 1932. He was instrumental in the incorporation of Roseto and was its first chief burgess, first secretary of the Roseto Board of Trade as well as the first general manager of the annual Lady of Mt. Carmel civic-religious celebration which he directed for 27 years.

He retired in 1946 and the hotel he formerly operated became the Martucci-Capobianco post of the American Legion.

Mr. and Mrs. Sabatino have seven living children, 15 grandchildren and one great grandchild.

Union Printers Down Kulp's Foundry, 10-6

Union Printers ran up their eighth straight victory in the Monroe County Softball League yesterday, with an 11-6 victory over Kulp's Foundry, at Stroudsburg Playground.

IAM took the measure of Tru-Matic, in the other circuit contest,

MONROE COUNTY SOFTBALL LEAGUE

Team	W.	L.	Pct.	G.B.
Eagles	6	0	1.000	—
Union Printers	6	0	1.000	—
Kulp's Foundry	3	3	.500	3
IAM	3	3	.500	3
Worthen Flower	3	3	.500	4
Tru-Matic	1	5	.167	5
Ransom	1	5	.167	5
Tucker's	1	5	.167	5

18-7, on the East Stroudsburg Junior High school field.

Big Inning

The outcome of the Union Printers-Kulp's Foundry game was in doubt through the first four innings, but the Printers took the lead in the fifth frame, with an outburst of six runs.

Even three runs in the seventh by Kulp's contingent failed to change the outcome of the battle.

First place will be at stake today, when the Eagles, with 20 straight victories, tangle with Union Printers, at Stroudsburg Playground. Gail Fegley will probably pitch for the Eagles and Bill Weber for the Printers. The other circuit contest today will send Ransom against Kulp's Foundry, at the East Stroudsburg Junior High school field.

Box score follows:

Union Printers (11)	AB	R	H	O	A	E

Jones Stops Lester

Newark, N. J., (AP)—Gene Jones of Camden, 211 and one-half pounds, cutting loose with a shower of torrid rights, scored a technical knockout over Charley Lester, Cleveland, 217 and one-quarter pounds, after 45 seconds of the second round of a scheduled eight-rounder last night at Meadowbrook Bowl.

'Jezebel's Husband' Finest Comedy In Years; Young GOP To Plan For Registration

By Leonard Randolph
 Mountaintop—One of the finest "comedies" written in recent years made its debut here Monday night, "Jezebel's Husband"—a play about the twilight years in the life of the prophet Jonah—is rich from beginning to end in three-dimensional characters, believable situations and genuine humor.

As the play opens, we find Jonah married to Jezebel, who has proved herself a wise business manager but something less than a desirable wife. The great prophet is, to put it mildly, a henpecked husband. His palace has been turned into a tramping ground for sightseers who pay their few shekels for a copy of the scroll containing Jonah's signature.

By the end of the first scene, it is apparent that "business" is not too good either with the palace or with Israel, whose king is badly in need of a new "prophecy" of good things to come. In the ensuing plot entanglements, Jonah is asked to prophesy falsely to the people of his country. He meets, after 25 years, his first love, Judith, and discovers he is still in love with her.

A young prophet "Micah" appears out of the desert with a true prophecy from God but his attempts to obtain an audience with the king are frustrated by Jezebel. Micah's prophecy—that the kingdom of Assyria will overrun the Jews—eventually comes true and Jonah is faced with a choice between becoming a paid seer for the Assyrian king Tiglath or escape into the desert with Judith and a return to simplicity.

Jonah's decision turns the tables on Jezebel, who stands to profit by the reversal. As the play closes the aging prophet seems once more on the road back to his God.

Robert Nathan has elected to tell his story in the form of a comedy. There can be no doubt that it is, indeed, an unusually humorous play for many of its lines shine with the genuine gleam of honest wit and healthy laughter. Yet only infrequently does the humor seem to be present in the play for its own sake—it is nearly always the logical outgrowth of the story and the human beings who inhabit it.

In the end, humor has succeeded where other devices might have failed. Like a good sermon, the play is not afraid to make its message felt through an illustration of humanity. For Mr. Nathan has several points to make in the play. He is saying, among other things, that a man has a right to be faithful to himself, to his own life and ideals, regardless of those other loyalties he may have. He is saying, also, that man's most irreligious act may be his betrayal of himself—and, consequently, of his god.

The fact that these "messages" are in the play may be purely secondary but there are many indications that the humor and wit put them across with depth and finality which might have been lacking in a more sententious form.

There are rough spots in the play, of course. After giving his work a hearing before an audience for the first time Monday night I believe Mr. Nathan has a pretty good idea himself of those things which need changing.

So far as I am concerned, the changes need not be drastic. The scenes between Judith and Jonah, I think, need paring—some of the phrases are repetitious.

I found one or two of the lines assigned to "Miriam" rather more suitable to the 20th century hairdresser's than to 731 B. C. This is, I presume, a part of the parallel the play draws between women of today and then. If the lines are not changed, then I'd suggest toning Miss Parish's hip-wriggling down a notch or two.

Shortly before the play opened its format was changed from three-acts to the two-acts which were used Monday night. I'd like to place my ballot for the way it was done at the opening night performance. Mr. Nathan will have to work a long time to find a more effective and pictorially beautiful climax for the intermission break than the end of the second scene.

Claude Rains' performance is electrifying and enchanting. It is one of his most satisfying characterizations. The same may be said for Carmen Matthews' portrayal of Jezebel—a role which dominates the play by sheer physical strength and common evil.

Claudia Morgan brings the right amount of sweetness to the role of Judith—but, as is often the case, the evil woman seems the stronger of the two and is remembered longer. Robert Emhardt, Harry Worth and Ruth McDevitt are all amusing in supporting roles.

Two especially fine portrayals are given by Oddie Davis and Vinie Burrows as servants in the palace—in each case the role made more convincing by the presence of actors with great talent.

A special place should be reserved for the dedicated young prophet Micah. Ben Gazarra is an excellent choice for the role. A student of Actors Studio in New York, Gazarra will be seen on Broadway for the first time—but not for the last—when the play opens there. He has a long and brilliant career ahead of him. Without Gazarra's sensitivity and fervor, Micah could not have held his own on the same stage with Jonah, Judith and Jezebel.

Sherman Mark's direction has brought to the surface all the subtleties of humor, the undertones of meaning and tragic shadows which are inherent in the play. Marks has handled a difficult assignment with artistry and understanding.

The Young Republicans of Monroe County will meet at the Beaver House, Stroudsburg, on Thursday at 7 p.m. to lay plans and start an intensive registration drive canvassing the homes of Monroe County.

At the last regular meeting held Tuesday, July 29, at the Indian Queen Hotel it was decided by the membership that every week until September 13, closing date for registration, the group would meet to conduct the drive.

Harold Wiggins, secretary, and Chester Kemp, registration chairman for the Senior Republican Council, were on hand to give expert advice to the younger group.

In addition to the registration drive planned for Thursday night, the founder of the present Young Republicans of Monroe County, Lt. Carolyn G. Toewe, home on leave from the U. S. Air Force, will address the club.

know, are authentic. If not, they were, at the very least, entertaining and colorful. The one set was executed with great skill by Ellen Meyer from designs by Edith Lutyens.

Properties, many of them nearly impossible to procure, were brought together by Marion Kinsella—an achievement which deserves, if nothing more, a scroll signed by the prophet Jonah.

"Jezebel's Husband" is a literature, amusing and important play. I hope it has the success it deserves on the street which is rapidly becoming the Great Blight Way.
